Garrick's Dog.

Sir John Malcolm was fond of telling this story of Garrick's pet spaniel. Mrs. Garrick's admiration of her husband's dramatic talents was intense, and on his great nights she would hang over her box, next the stage, in rapturous delight. The one flaw in her idol, she claimed, was a taste for low life, for which she blamed him greatly, insisting that he loved better to play Scrub to a low lived audience than one of his superior characters before an audience of taste.

On one particular occasion she was in her box in the theater when Garrick's impersonation of Richard III was applauded to the echo. In that day a farce followed the tragedy of the evening, and as Mrs. Garrick rose to leave before it, her husband came to the box to say he had some busing ness in the greenroom which would detain him, so, most unwillingly, the lady was obliged to acquiesce, and remain through the closing entertainment. This proved to be a comical series of blundering adven-tures which had befallen a countryman who had left his farm to see London, and on his return gave his neighbors an account of the wonders he had met.

This characterization was received with such peals of applause that Mrs. Garrick, ever zealous of her husband's fame, began to think it rivaled those lately lavished on Richard III. Her feelings were nearly worked up to fever heat when she was attracted by the frantic efforts of her little spaniel dog to overleap the balcony that separated him from the stage, when she immediately became aware of the truth that the actor was Garrick and exclaimed, "Strange that a dog should know his master when the woman who loved him best in the world could not pierce his disguise,"-Harper's Young People.

Nepotism in Greece

I do not think there is any other country where political feeling, both local and cen-tral, runs so high as in Greece. This warmth of political passion is still more intensified by the fact that, in the choice of all candidates in this representative government, the family and its relations of kinship form the essential guide. And when it is borne in mind that nearly all the offices, local and central, down to the postmen and the attendants at museums, depend upon the success of each party, and that the family will at once run to their own member of parliament to help them in releasing one of their kinsman who has been convicted of a crime, it will be understood how, in a small community where there are no industries but precarious agriculture and fishing, the political differ-ences permeate every neek and cranny of

This fact the foreigner who would excavate in Greece must always bear in mind. In dealing with it he must, from the very ontset, manifest kindness, fairness and firmness; and he must succeed in impressing these three qualities upon the people with whom he is dealing, so that they at once feel and are drawn out by the kindness, gain absolute faith in the fairness, and learn to realize and depend upon the firmness.—Charles Waldstein in Century.

Absentmindedness.

"I was with a surveying party in New Mexico," said an old civil engineer. "Our supplies ran short and it was a long way to a town. Among other things we got out of tobacco. One man found a package of cigarrettes in the pocket of an old coat, and there was rejoicing. But a package of eigarettes did not last long and after they had been distributed and consumed an odd cigarette remained. Six men wanted it. I was the seventh. I wanted t, too, but was too dignified to say so.

"Finally I proposed that the fellows race for it. It w s decided that they should go half a mile, stand in line, and when they saw me fire a pistol run for the tent, the Cures Chapped Hands, Wounds, Burns, Etc first to get the prize. They started to walk to the half mile point. The day was warm and I sat lazily watching them. They squared around, signaled ready, and I fired. The six came panting and sweating over the sands. 'Where's my cigarette?' shouted the victor. Well, what could I say, for the stump of it was between my lips.

"A clear case," he continued, "a clear case of absentmindedness.—Son Francisco Examiner.

A Monster Cannon.

The many strange machines known as catapults, balistas, etc., had their counter-parts all over Asia. It may be mentioned that the last instance of the use of the catapult in Europe was at the great siege of Gibraltar, where one was built by order of General Eliott, to "lob" shells into a part of the Spanish works too close to allow the guns to depress enough. But when cannon and musicets had once come into use they were soon adopted everywhere.

The great gun of Bijapur was cast in 1549 at Ahmeduagar. It is 28 inches in di-ameter of bore and weighs over forty tons; and as the two places are distant nearly 200 miles as the crow flies, it would be interesting to know how it was transported. It was used in several battles by the Mogul emperors, sacks of copper coins being fired from it. It was named Malik-i-Maidan, or "the monarch of the field."-Chambers'

Why the Rat Should Be Exterminated. When the fact that the rat is a most dangerous agent in distributing the germs of certain diseases, science and ingenuity will be brought to bear in making him extinct, at least in regions occupied by man. It is true that the rabbit is still a pest in Aus-tralia, as the so called English sparrow is throughout this country, but should the sparrow and the rabbit prove to be the vehicles of deadly diseases as well as the workers of less alarming mischief it would not be long before they would be extermi-nated.—Dr. S. E. Weber's Lecture.

A Purnace Valve.

A valve for preventing serious loss in furnaces has given excellent results. It is a trap constructed of malleable plate like an ordinary gas tube, the passage being closed and opened by being filled with and emptied of water. A vessel holding water s raised and lowered on this trap. the heated currents are passing, the passage is empty and dry, and thus evaporation is avoided.—New York Times.

There are now six unmarried sovereigns in Europe—the grand duke of Hesse, the prince of Bulgaria, the infant monarchs of Spain, Holland and Servia, and the unhappy king of Bavaria. The young kheis also still a bachelor. Of these seven, however, only the prince of Bul-garia and the grand duke are of marriage-able age and condition.—London Public

An instance of what neglected Ca'arrh will lead to is given in the case of Mrs Anna Louison, whose statements follow, and who suffered in the most serious manner from H. ADACHE, SORE THRO.T. DE-FNESS, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, 1 UNG TROUBLE, CATARBH OF STOMACH, and NERS PROSTRATION.

Mrs. Louison lives at the co ner of River Road

Mrs Louison lives at the co-ner of River Road and Bridge Ave. She says:—
"My trouble began rea ly four years ago, with extarrh of the head. I had vio ent hesdaches, the top of my read being nearly split by the pain, My nose and tead stopped up. My nose was dry and painful, and though I smiffed up all kinds of remedies, I could not make it moist or stop the burning. My throat became so sore that I found it almost impossible to swallow. It was feverishly dry and my month was dry and hot also. I had severe pains in my bresst and back and awful stitches in the side. I contracted a severe cough which was very distressing. I had no apptite, and food distressed me. I also had faining spells. I was told I would die from consump ng spells. I was told I would die from consam;

tion. It seemed impossible for me to breathe. I have been under treatment three weeks and now have no fainting spells, and my ca'arrh is entirely cured. I recommend those afflicted to apply to the SCOTT MEDICAL INSTITUTE.

NOW IS THE TIME.

One Month's Treatment in Summer Equal to Three in Winter.

The present warm weather is a boon to sufferers from catarrh. For these reasons:

In the first place, there is less lisbility, at this period of the year, to take cold than at any other time. Consequently there is no irritating cause of delay in cure or probability of a relapse.

Secondly, the climate is all that can be desired. Thirdly, nature is kindly in summer and lends its best aid to the efforts of the physician. One month's treatment now is worth three in winter.

Now is the time and the opportunity is just what is desired for the worst cases. Do not let it go, by thicking you will get well (for with the first cold, your trouble will return worse than ever), but place yourself under the treatment employed at Scott Medical Institute and have done for you in the next two months what might not be possible to be effected until rext summer.
